Anson Jew is a storyboard and concept artist, working on live-action and animated projects for movies, TV and interactive media. He co-authored Professional Storyboarding: Rules of Thumb for Focal Press and teaches storyboarding at Otis School of Design. His film credits include Curse of Chucky, Prince Caspian, TMNT, Sky Captain, and Anacondas. TV credits include Scooby Doo: Mystery Inc., Growing Up Creepie and Wolverine and the X-Men. Clients include previz companies like The Third Floor and advertising houses like Directors Bureau, Blind, Anonymous Content and BelieveMedia. He has created art for interactive media companies like Deep Focus, Midway, Ojingo Labs, EA Sports, and Crackpot. His pinup illustrations won official selection in the Aphrodisia Showcase twice and in 1998, he was awarded the Xeric Foundation Grant to self-publish his comic book, Saturday Nite. Other print clients include WritersCorps, Pacific Sun Wear, and Selling Power Magazine. He has also created toy designs for Radica, Learning Curve and Toy Vault. Before going independent, he was an artist and animator at LucasArts on Full Throttle, Curse of Monkey Island, Fate of Atlantis and others.
